Located on the banks of the Saint Joseph River, this project was designed to house cultural and civic functions for the Century Center Authority of the city of South Bend.

The 250,000 square foot development is comprised of five distinct brick buildings grouped around a large central courtyard and linked by glass-roofed pedestrian streets, a promenade along the Saint Joseph River, and an island park. Incorporated within the complex are a convention center, private meeting rooms, banquet and catering facilities, art center with workshops, art gallery, and a six hundred seat theater. The firm was commissioned again in 1995 to further develop the master plan and design additions to the center that included a new art museum, new meeting rooms and a concourse entry from the Collegiate Football Hall of Fame.
